Explanation of the different types of editing:

Copyediting: making grammatical corrections; checking that style is consistent throughout the piece (ex: using (or not using) Oxford commas throughout); checking for accuracy and consistency.

Stylistic Editing: checking the piece for clarity and consistency in writing (ex: flagging possible tangents, areas where readers might question what is going on; chapter and sentence flow and pace; language suiting the intended audience, etc.), researching accuracy of facts, where necessary.

Developmental Editing: help with book restructuring; plot/character development suggestions; discussing major strengths and weaknesses of the piece, etc.)
